

Elevate – Brain Training

(Free – though in-app purchases for Pro version)
(IOS and Google Play)
(Phone and Tablet compatible)

Effective revision and exam success is not just about having all the information you need in front you to learn. Your brain is a muscle and as any athlete will tell you, winning is not simply about doing your event over and over again. They train their body to be able to do what they do. That means you need to train your brain to be able to download information, understand it, store it and access information again when you choose at the speed that you choose. So this little app is a good one to download. It's designed by experts in neuroscience and cognitive learning and encourages you to train your brain. It's fun and easy to access. Once you have been set up (through a series of questions and assessment tests) they start you off on a program slowly pushing you each day depending on how well you did. They track your progress and you can do as many additional test as you like over and above the ones that are set for you each day.
